

Andrés Castañeda

Global Risk Management Executive

Clarity before consequential decisions.

ABOUT

Andrés Castañeda is a global risk management executive with twenty seven years advising boards and executive teams on enterprise risk, internal audit, and governance across North and Latin America. He spent two decades as Principal at an international advisory firm, leading cross-border teams of more than forty professionals across fourteen Latin American markets. Today he works independently, advising senior leaders on the decisions that matter most, in plain language, early enough to matter.

Based in Miami • Bilingual in English and Spanish • Boards, audit committees, C-suite

SIGNATURE TALKS

Three conversations boards keep asking for.

Adapted per audience · 45–90 min

01

Internal audit readiness for AI

What audit needs to know, build, and stop doing to provide assurance over probabilistic systems in a regulatory environment still being written.

02

AI governance for boards and audit committees

A clear frame for overseeing AI risk at the enterprise level: the questions to ask, the gaps most likely to be missed, and what separates early movers from late explainers.

03

The communication edge in internal audit

Sharpens the communication and judgment skills that separate a strong auditor from a trusted advisor to senior leadership.

WHAT AUDIENCES TAKE AWAY

- A clear frame for AI risk that works inside existing governance structures.
- Specific questions boards and audit functions can use immediately to surface gaps.
- A more direct way to communicate risk to senior leadership, without softening the substance.
- The confidence to act early on AI governance, before regulatory and reputational consequences catch up.
